Verr in Richmond.

So only the future can tell the place of 1910 in the history of Richmond and of Virginia. It has been a year of business expansion, a year in which, in all things material, the city of the old South and the new has demonstrated its position of leadership among the manicipalities of the country between the Potomac and the Gulf. It has shown official confirmation of a 50 per cent, increase in population within a decade. In all things by which men count progress and material greatness, Richmond has made strides during the year which has gone.

Yet many of the events have been just such as hoppen any year. There have been lerhaps, an average number of disasters, all of them fortunately small and affecting only one or two people at a time. Some distinguished citizens have been byried in Hollywood; with every fall from ranks another man has stepped forward to take the vacant place, for this is the relentless have of Hic.

Virginia's Presperity.

The State has also been singularly prosperous. With bumper crops of corn and of apples, which her citizens sold at what a few years ago would have seemed fabrious prices, she is at last taking her place among those Commonwealths which have their part in feeding the world, instead of being a purchaser from more thrifty communities. In agricultural development is he is coming to the front, and the past year has seen renewed activity in the movement for modern methods. The educational upilift is po small part of the Virginia apirt of the age. The State has learned the lesson that the schools exist solely for the future—which is the child.

There were bondres here and there, there was much toasting and many good wishes, but in a few moments peace reigned again in the city, and 1911 had been born.

Watch night services were held in some quarters of Richmond, but for the most part, because New Year's Evo was on Saturday, whatever religious observances there may be were reserved until to-day. There were many private watchers, and no doubt the usual number of vows were made.

The passing of the old year and the birth of the new seems especially conducive to retrospect. [Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Suffolk, Va., December 31.—Circuit Judge McLemore late to-night announced the appointment of E. Framstory as Commonwealth's attorney of Southampton county, to succeed William James Sebrell, deceased. There were six applicants, including every lawyer of prominence in the county. Story is Democratic county chairman and a member of the J. Peter Helland faction in county politics. He supported William A. Young in the August congressional primary and is regarded as a strong organization man in State politics. Judge McLemore said tonight that Story was not an asptrant at first, but that he appointed him because he is competent and is apparently the people's choice.

DEEP SILENCE REIGNS

Ne Word Has Come from Principals in Elopement.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Washington, D. C., December 31,—Deep silence continues to be observed by the principals in the Wylic-Flichborn elopement, which has come to be an accepted fact by Washington society.

Mrs. Wylic, for whom great sympathy is universally felt, has partially recovered from her attack or nervous prostration following her husband's abandonment, and has tried to make the holidays bright for her young children.

It is said on good authority here that the cloping couple left Canada en route to England, and thus cluded the watchers at New York. Private advices received here are to the effect that Mrs. Hichborn and Mr. Wylic were seen a day or two ago in Italy on their way to Egypt.

Severe Winter, With Heavy Snova, Itesponsible for Suffering.
Turing December 31.—A severe winter with heavy snows, is causing many disasters, especially in the province of Cunco, where railway communication has been interrupted.
Many avalanches are reported, and it is feared that there have been numerous fatalities.
Throughout Cunco the law courts have suspended their sessions, as travel is impossible. Yesterday the dressmakers received a telegram' from Mrs. Longworth asking why the gown had not arrived. Hurrled inquiry of the express company seemed to indicate that it had been stolen from a wagon during the holiday rush. If no trace of the missing apparel is found before to-night the medists will put a special force of dressmakers at work in an effort to construct a duplicate of the gown in time for the reception. Mrs. Longworth declares that she will not attend except in a brand-new gown.
